Hospitality & the Gospel

September 2010

Hospitality calls us to make space in our homes and our hearts for others; and our model here is God Himself. In a unique way, hospitality reflects the heart of the gospel. Welcoming a guest - even more a stranger - into our home and lavishing upon them the love and care usually reserved for family is a good picture of God's love for us - the far-off being adopted as God's beloved through the work of Christ. Hospitality - both God's and ours - has been on my heart this summer. With our building closed for some much needed remodeling, we've lacked a place to welcome and offer hospitality to large groups of refugees, a place where nameless faces become friends.

As of August 21st, however, we've re-opened our ministry center! Rejoice with us (thankful to offer this gospel-hospitality) and with our refugee friends (thankful for a safe-place filled with love)! Praise God for His grace and provision!

Thanks for your support, prayers, and encouragement! By God's grace:

Brett, Kristin, Sofia, & Emma
